

Chaz Powell – Penn State University

Chaz Powell's ability to make a seamless transition from wide receiver to cornerback during the 2010 season speaks to his overall outstanding athletic ability and football acumen. A safety during his redshirt season in 2007, Powell was a wideout the next two years, but the coaching staff shifted him to corner in spring practice in 2010. He returned to wideout at the start of last season, but moved back to the secondary prior to the Minnesota game. After starting five games a year ago at cornerback, Powell will look to make a larger impact on the defensive side of the ball this fall. The same skills that made him a standout receiver have assisted him in his transition to cornerback -- good hands, quickness and a nose for the ball. Powell is a gifted, hard-working and confident player. With his speed and vision, he has proven to be a game-changer on special teams.
