

Randy White – Dallas Cowboys, University of Maryland

Hailing from Pittsburgh, PA and a 6-4, 257-pound All-America defensive end at the University of Maryland in 1974, Randy White was the Dallas Cowboys' first pick and the second player selected in the 1975 National Football League Draft.

Randy capped his first season as a regular by being named as the co-Most Valuable Player in the Cowboys' 27-10 win over the Denver Broncos in Super Bowl XII.

In 1978, Randy was named the NFC Defensive Player of the Year.

What set Randy apart from the other Cowboys was not his ability to make big plays but his consistency and his willingness to work hard.

Blessed with all the traits for a great defensive lineman – quickness, balance, toughness, ability, desire, intelligence and durability – Randy missed only one game in 14 seasons. He played in 209 regular season games, at the time of his election to the Hall of Fame in 1994, the second most by any Cowboy in history. Randy played in three Super Bowls and six NFC championship games. He recorded four sacks in the three Super Bowls, including two in Super Bowl X against Pittsburgh. In his regular season career, Randy was credited with 1,104 tackles, 701 solo tackles and 111 sacks.
